Comics and ELD

Presenter: Rachel Hudson

Visuals are a very powerful tool to support reading and writing for English Language Learners. We will start off the session reviewing the benefits of using comics to support reading comprehension in Math, Science, English, and Social Studies. We will then dive into the benefits of using these graphic novels as visual communication to support students writing. Teachers will wrap up the lesson exploring Gene Yang's graphic novel American Born Chinese.

10:45 am - 12:15 pm: Session 2

Teachers as Curators

Presenter: Chalida Anusasananan

English language learners need multiple points of entry to access language. In this workshop, teachers will participate in a write-around and structured discussion that can be used with English language learners as entry points for writing. The subject for this PD for teachers will be examining their role as curators when placing texts in front of students, and the responsibility that comes with that role.

"Can I write next to my friend?"

Presenter: Malia Tayabas-Kim

Voice and choice is critical to empowering English Language Learners as writers. However, creating the conditions for students to tap into their intrinsic motivation to learn while also developing their writing skills can create much anxiety for the teacher. In this workshop, teachers will participate in various student engagement strategies that can be used with English Language Learners as well as all students to cultivate student voice and choice in opinion writing.

Attacking ELD Conceptually

Presenters: Rachel Sagapolu

This workshop was inspired by a seemingly simple question: what does it mean to really understand something? Using this question, participants will explore strategies for teaching English Language learners conceptually so that students are constructing the knowledge.
